Project of the Year

The Litehouse Demonstration Homes Project received the 2008 Project of the Year Award at the 22nd Annual Planning & Zoning Workshop held at Sinclair Community College Friday, December 8th. Planning and zoning officials from throughout Ohio attended the workshop.

The Litehouse project was recognized for the innovative approach taken by the City of Dayton, City of West Carrollton, City of Kettering and CountyCorp to advance community based revitalization projects in their neighborhoods. In 2006 the cities and CountyCorp, collectively known as the Partnership for Affordable Sustainability, challenged area builders to develop an energy efficient home design that would conform to LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) standards. The Litehouse was selected for its unique design and adherence to the LEED standards.

We are honored that the Litehouse was selected among all the worthy projects nominated statewide. We thank our partners in the City of Dayton, Amy Riegel and Amy Walbridge; City of West Carrollton, Greg Gaines; City of Kettering, Tom Robillard and Kip Bohachek; and CountyCorp, Sue Pratt and Jim Martone. We also thank our partner National City, represented by Eric Loudon, for their financial support of the project.
